16. Specific lobbying issues

Sent a letter, signed by 25 religious and human rights leaders of varying faiths, to members of Congress, communicating concerns regarding the escalating threats to religious freedom in Russia, and respectfully requesting that they raise this issue with the Russian Ambassador to the United States. Russian authorities are using the 2002 Extremism Law to combat “religious extremism” and this has led to a crackdown on religions, and nationwide bans of widely-published religious literature.

Also kept congressional staff informed about threats to religious freedom in France. An interministerial government entity in France has compiled a repository of records made up entirely of one-sided accusations and allegations against so-called “sectarian” movements. The French government has not made these records public, but they have been made available to professionals such as judges, prosecutors and attorneys for use in cases against these movements. The records have also been made available to public authorities and local officials who make decisions that affect the rights of these groups, such as denying the renting of conference halls or meeting rooms to members of the groups. This practice of designating minority religious groups as “sectarian movements” and keeping a secret repository of records on them is the same as keeping a secret “blacklist” of groups that are then discriminated against. This has destructive consequences on the individual rights to freedom of religion or belief as guaranteed by Article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. France has ratified international human rights instruments guaranteeing the right to freedom of religion and belief. It is bound to uphold these standards as a member of the international community.

16. Specific lobbying issues

Worked with other members of an informal working group to lobby for passage of the National Criminal Justice Commission Act of 2009. This is a bill to "establish the National Criminal Justice Commission." Also, worked with other members of an informal working group to lobby for full funding of the Second Chance Act in fiscal year 2011, which will help to increase public safety by improving reentry from prisons, jails, and juvenile facilities. The Second Chance Act was signed into law in April 2008.
